UT Opportunity Forum presents
uniting our divided city: racial and ethnic divides in education

Austin’s diverse student population offers great potential for the creation of dynamic and inclusive learning environments. However, the racial and economic divides in the city also pose significant challenges for educational access and equity.

Join us for the third in our Opportunity Forum 2015-2016 Lunch Series, featuring policymakers, school district stakeholders, and UT faculty working to positively address racial, ethnic, and economic disparities in education in the Austin metropolitan area.

Panelists include

Ted Gordon
Austin ISD School Board Member
Chair and Associate Professor Department of African & African Diaspora Studies

Garrett Groves
Director
Economic Opportunity Program
Center for Public Policy Priorities

Angela Valenzuela
Professor
College of Education

Allen Weeks
Executive Director
Austin Voices for Education & Youth

Moderated by

Terrance Green
Assistant Professor
College of Education

Jennifer Holme
Associate Professor
College of Education

Austin’s diverse student population offers great potential for the creation of dynamic and inclusive learning environments. However, the racial and economic divides in the city also pose significant challenges for educational access and equity.

Friday
February 19
12:00 - 1:30 pm
Bass Auditorium
Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs
Lunch provided
dividesineducation.eventbrite.com